Reasons to get involved in your professional organization

There are many reasons to get involved with your medical assisting professional organization. From networking, to gratification of volunteering, to developing lasting professional and personal relationships. Below are 3 reasons you should become involved.

1. Professional Development: You will make professional contacts, further your education and obtain required CEUs, and maybe even find a mentor if you are new to the profession. Your first step is to show up and second step is to get involved. You can begin slow by being on a committee.
2. Make new connections: You will build long-lasting friendships. Also, you can open the door to be exposed to other medical assistants in a variety of medical offices and specialties. This can be a new network of job advancement. Being involved in a professional organization demonstrates to an employer that you are serious about your profession and that you want to continue to grow your knowledge base.
3. Discover your passion: Find a desire to grow and improve your profession and skills. Change can occur through the effort of dedicated professionals. Opportunities exist for involvement on a local, state, and national level.
